"SMILIN' THROUGH"—QUEEN'S THEATRE

In "Smilin' Through," now showing at the Queen's Theatre, Norma Shearer returns to romance, supported by a brilliant cast including Fredric March and Leslie Howard. It is a splendid film both as to beauty of production and acting. The story is that of a man who cannot forget the tragedy of his marriage, broken off on the very day fixed for the wedding. Years afterwards, the son of the man who caused him bitterness, returns and falls in love with his niece. Norma Shearer reaches new heights in her portrayal of the two girls, and O. P. Heggie, Ralph Forbes, Beryl Mercer, David Torrence and Margaret Seddon help to make this an outstanding picture.

MAIL REVIEW

"OUT ALL NIGHT"—CENTRAL THEATRE

Slim Summerville and Zasu Pitts, who did good work in "They Just Had to Get Married," are now seen in a rollicking comedy, "Out All Night," at present showing at the Central Theatre.

The supporting cast is a brilliant one and includes such favourites as Alexander Carr, the original Abe Potash of the famous "Potash and Permuter," and Laura Hope Crews. Carr is seen as an agitated department-store manager, who tries to be diplomatic and smooth out quarrels in his store. Other notable members of the cast are Shirley Grey and George Hackathorne.

MAIL REVIEW

"THE WARRIOR'S HUSBAND"—KING'S THEATRE

"The Warrior's Husband," now showing at the King's Theatre, is a particularly novel and amusing comedy set in a mythical period of world history when countries were ruled by Amazons.

Women are seen as political, military and intellectual leaders, while the men remain at home to look after the sewing and the children.

The producer takes full advantage of this humorous situation to provide one of the funniest climates yet seen on the screen.

Elissa Landi, whose recent performances have established her as one of the most attractive players in films, has the leading role. The supporting cast includes Majorie Rambeau, Ernest Truex and David Manners.

MAIL REVIEW

"STRANGE INTERLUDE"—STAR THEATRE

In "Strange Interlude" which is now showing at the Star Theatre, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have undertaken the reproducing not only of the spoken word but also the "spoken thoughts" of the characters.

Apart from this the picture ranks as something outstanding if only for the brilliant interpretation of a most difficult role by Norma Shearer. She is at first the young girl grieving the death of her lover who was killed in the War.

Miss Shearer adds to her many successes by her acting in this picture. The supporting role are well played.

URGE FOR ECONOMIC ISOLATION.

Free Trade Policy No Peace Safeguard.

MR. J. M. KEYNES' VIEWS.

New Haven, Connecticut. Mr. John Maynard Keynes, the noted British economist, says in an article in the "Yale Review" that "the nations of the world should pursue a policy of economic isolation if they wish to lessen the danger of international conflict."

Mr. Keynes asserts that England's free trade policy in the past did not prove a safeguard of international peace.

"Ideas, knowledge, science, hospitality, travel—these are the things which should of their nature be international," he says, "but let goods be homegrown whenever it is reasonably and conveniently possible, and, above all, let finance be primarily national."

"The protection of a country's existing foreign interest, the capture of new markets, the progress of economic imperialism—these are a scarcely avoidable part of a scheme of things which aims at the maximum of international specialization and at the maximum geographic diffusion of capital wherever its seat of ownership."

Reuter.

LESSON SERMON

First Church of Christ, Scientist—Hong Kong.

"Soul" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which was read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 13.

The Golden Text was: "My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God." (Psalms 52: 2).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it. For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" (Matt. 16: 24-26).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "We cannot deny that Life is self-sustained, and we should never deny the everlasting harmony of Soul, simply because, to the mortal senses, there is seeming discord. It is our ignorance of God the divine Principle, which produces apparent discord, and the right understanding of Him restores harmony. Truth will at length compel us all to exchange the pleasures and pains of sense for the joys of Soul" (p. 390).

"DESTINY RIDES AGAIN"—MAJESTIC THEATRE

Nothing of the "super-special" production was attempted in the picture that brings Tom Mix back to the screen. Apparently Universal's aim was to give Mix a return vehicle of the same school as the series of Westerns in which he previously won fame.

Mix is, as always, aided and abetted by the indefatigable Tony. Claudia Dell, is a bit miscast as a typical heroine of the old West. Earle Foxe is an A-1 villain.

BRIDGE NOTES

CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

BY ELY CULBERTSON

World's Champion Player And Greatest Card Analyst

THE RARE GRAND COUP

Most well-played hands are a result of overbidding. If a hand has been bid quite conservatively and properly, it is usually easy to play, and, in those cases where problems are presented, the declarer's course is almost always clear. The good player occasionally indulges in overbidding, because of his confidence that his ability in the play of the hand will surmount all reasonable obstacles.

In the recent Vanderbilt Cup Contest, Mr. Julian Barth and Mr. Walter Malowan reached a contract of seven hearts where they logically should have only bid six. The Grand Slam was dependent on a finesse and a 3-2 break in trumps, and consequently was far from being a 3-to-1 chance under the old scoring. The finesse was successful, but the trumps did not break, whereupon Mr. Barth proceeded to prove his skill as a player by executing that very rare play, the Grand Coup.

1—Rebidding the six-card suit before showing the higher ranking four-card suit.

2—A bid which only serves the purpose of keeping the hand below game. Mr. Malowan evidently wishes to force another response from his partner.

3—Now showing the second suit.

4—This bid is a little optimistic, but at the same time Mr. Malowan is hard pressed to find a suitable bid on the hand. In my own opinion five notrump or six hearts would have been a better bid.

5—Not wishing to play the hand at notrump with a void suit.

6—The diamond-bid having been only a cue bid, North is now obliged to return to his partner's best suit.

Mr. Barth was lucky in receiving a spade opening on the hand, although he could have taken the finesse himself later. West's Opening cannot be particularly criticized, as the opponents had bid every suit. The first trick, therefore, was won with the spade Knave and two rounds of hearts taken. At this point it was disclosed that East originally held four hearts. Mr. Barth re-entered the Dummy with the spade King and then led the Ace and another club, ruffing in his own hand. Next he played the Queen and another diamond, winning with the King and Dummy, and another low club allowed him to shorten himself once more. He now cashed the Ace of spades and led his last diamond over to the Ace. Having previously discarded his fourth spade on the club Ace, he now had left in his hand nothing but the Ace-Ten of hearts. Holding a perfect tenace over East, he now led the club in safety, and it made no difference which of his trumps East played.

FRENCH PARLIAMENT AND LIBEL.

Attacks On Politicians To Be Suppressed.

BILL TABLED IN CHAMBER

Paris.

Persons who are attacked in the speeches of French Senators and Deputies in Parliament will, if a Bill tabled in the Chamber becomes law, be able to reply to their assailants in the Journal Officiel—the French "Hansard." The Bill is known to have influential backing.

At present speeches made in Parliament here are exempted from the law and no action for slander or libel can arise out of them.

Under the new procedure, a person considering himself injured could write a letter stating his case to the President of the Senate or of the Chamber. The President would then read the letter in session, and it would then be published in the Journal Officiel. The reply would be restricted to twice the length of the attack or insinuation. Also the Senator or Deputy who made the speech would be invited to make his own comments on the reply, with which they would be published.

All newspapers that had reproduced the original offensive remarks would be obliged to reproduce the reply.—Reuter.

FAMOUS GOLD FIELD 40 YEARS OLD.

Still Producing One Ton Per Month.

Perth, West Australia.

Kaigoorlie, formerly Hannan's Find, was discovered on June 15, 1893—40 years ago, and from within a three-quarter mile radius of the spot where Paddy Hannan's party made their discovery gold is still being produced at the rate of a ton a month!

Hannan lived on a Western Australian Government pension in Victoria, dying in 1895, when he was 83 years old. In four decades £24,000,000 has been paid out in dividends from the great Golden Mile, and one mine, the Great Boulder, has produced $16,000,000 worth of gold alone. During its lifetime the Golden Horseshoe produced 170 tons of gold from 50 acres. The Golden Mile has produced £30,000,000 worth of gold to date, and many properties in its bounds still have many years of life assured them.—Reuter.

LITERARY NOTES

"NOT AMUSED" TO MEET ABRAHAM

Looking Balfour's Hands Out Of His Pockets.

STORIES OF QUEEN VICTORIA

Stories about all sorts of famous people—Queen Victoria, Queen Alexandra, Lord Kitchener, the Kaiser, Admiral von Tirpitz, and many other—are told by Lady Maud Warrender in her autobiography "My First Sixty Years," published by Cassell.

Here is a story of the late Lord Balfour. Lady Maud had been invited in 1898 to "dine and sleep at Osborne."

"After dinner," she relates, "the usual ceremony of sending for the guests one by one took place, and Arthur Balfour was the first to be called."

"I noticed with some amusement that when he stood in front of her chair he had both his hands in his trouser pockets."

"The Queen fixed her eyes first on the right hand with a look of astonished disapproval, and it was removed, and then the left hand, had to come out after a similar treatment, and finally he straightened himself up."

And The Queen Said—

Here is another story of Queen Victoria and Lady Southampton, one of the Royal ladies-in-waiting whom Lady Maud describes as "a sanctimonious, pious old soul who liked to talk of the world to come, and whom the Queen found at times rather tedious."

"Oh, your Majesty, won't it be wonderful to see all those we read of in the Bible when we go to Heaven! Think of St. Paul!..."

"Yes, dear Lady Southampton truly wonderful."

"And think of meeting St. Luke and—or, the Prophets, your Majesty. Isaiah and Jeremiah."

"Yes, dear Lady Southampton, indeed." (Getting rather bored.)

"And then, your Majesty, David! And Solomon!"

"Yes; yes; yes." (More bored, and with a sigh.)

"And finally, your Majesty, fancy meeting Abraham..."

That finished it.

"No, No!" said the Queen furiously. "I will not meet Abraham!"

"Words" With Kitchener.

When the late Lord Kitchener was in command in India, he showed Lady Maud his collection of Oriental china, of which he was exceedingly proud, until he was informed by an expert "You have been stuck," then he disposed of it, and with the help of those who really knew started collecting the real stuff.

Proudly displaying his original collection which his guest was duly admiring, he turned to her and said, "In his gruff way: 'Of course I know, Lady Maud, that you know absolutely nothing about Oriental china.' Intensely annoyed, I said nothing, but just left him and walked away; but the sting remained, and I wondered how could I get even with him for that quite uncalled-for rudeness."

"I had my revenge when, two nights later, he took me in to dinner at Government House, where the previous evening there had been a concert, which Lady Minto asked me to arrange, and at which I sang."

"The Viceregal band had played a lovely programme. Said Lord Kitchener to me: 'I say, Lady Maud, that concert last night was all very well, but I think you should have put the muzzel on the Viceroy's band. It was a bit too highbrow for some of us.'"

"I leaped at my chance and said: 'Well, Lord Kitchener, of course I know that you know absolutely nothing whatever about music. Whereupon he shot round, amazed, and said: 'That's rather an unkind thing to say, isn't it?' 'Yes, perhaps it is, I said, 'but you were very rude and very unkind to me about your china two nights ago, and now we're all square.'"

"And then we both laughed and were good friends again."

A Bet With Tirpitz.

Lady Maud was one of the guests of the ex-Kaiser at the now historic Kiel Week in 1914, and she tells of a bet which she had with Admiral Tirpitz, and of a talk with the ex-Kaiser.

Every one of us was anticipating civil war in Ireland, and she says, "Admiral Tirpitz at dinner spoke of Ireland, and I told him how soon the trouble would come. He said: 'I do not believe it; you

HOWARD SPRING'S
Guide To The New Books

[The Eaglet. By Captain Herald Victorin. (Lorat Dickson. 7s. 6d.)]

It was a bet in a London club that sent Jules Verne's Phineas Fogg round the world in eighty days. It was a bet in the Knickerbocker Club, New York, which started the air race round the world described in this book.

Captain Victorin is a Swede (the book is a translation), and we must not complain that the hero is a Swedish aviator and that final victory goes to Sweden. He allows Great Britain a place. The race began with every nation in the world represented by its crack aviators; it ended with Great Britain and the United States of America rushing to what looked like a dead-heat end, when the tiny Swedish plane dropped out of the clouds and won by what appears to have been little more than the width of a wing.

The great thing about this book is its pace. While all the other nations entered vast many-engineered craft with large crews, Sweden entered a one-engine seaplane, manned by Lieutenant Jan Nord and Karl Bong, a monster mechanic.

I feel sure that boys are going to read about the adventures of these two for many years to come. Captain Victorin has raised their doings to that pitch of the futuristic heroism that is irresistible to the young and to many who are no longer young. How they fought with Bedouins in the desert, sweltered through the tropics, froze in the stratosphere, hurled themselves through the snowy fastnesses of the Andes; how they rocked in typhoons; how snakes and monkeys came aboard; how the mammoth Bong played his concertina to keep them awake at God knows how many thousand feet when all was numb save the will to win: this is the matter of a book that goes with the roaring pace of the planes themselves.

Here is Karl Bong in action: "Out of the blazing bungalow came a bareheaded giant with singed hair, his collar torn and flapping round his ears, dragging a human wreck in each hand. Round his neck was a window-frame, and after him trailed half a wall."

That, undoubtedly, is the stuff to give 'em!

UNREAL BUT DESIRABLE.

"A Meave Must Marry." By Dorothea Conyers. (Hutchinson. 7s. 6d.)]

Meave O'Connor at 39, beautiful, heiress of the desirable estate of Crom, was saying, "The Meaves never marry."

There was, of course, no lack of men who would have embarrassed themselves with Crom for the sake of Meave. There was Darby Barry-Barry, of Barryville; there was an English diplomat; and plenty more. The diplomat was worried about Crom. When he looked at its pastures he realised how sheep would sweeten them; but the advice was received with scorn. Sheep would tempt dogs to be worriers, and no good dog should have such temptation put in its way.

"Dogs are the first things," said Meave; "then horses, and then—pears." She also thought that "Jorrocka" should be a task at all boys' schools.

Miss Conyers' strength is in depicting this sort of feckless, light-hearted person. She gives us grand days in the open air with horses and hounds, with rod and line on the salmon streams, with the wasp-hunters among the pears. It is all a little unreal, as Heaven itself is unreal, and like Heaven, it is a desirable haven and escape.

English people are too sensible to have anything of that sort in the British Isles.

"My answer was: 'I'm afraid we shall, Admiral, in fact I am ready to bet you a sovereign that there will be Civil War in Ireland within a month from now.'"

"He said, 'All right I will take your bet.'"

"And I should have won it if what happened, on August 4, had not transformed every Irishman into a Loyalist—from that wonderfully dramatic moment when John Redmond stood up in the House of Commons and led 'God save the King.'"

"Old Tirpitz, of course, as things turned out, thought I had said this on purpose, as apparently the trouble in Ireland was one of the things Germany counted on to keep us out of their war."

WOMAN IN AMERICA. [Self-Made Woman. By Faith Baldwin. (Sampson Low 7s. 6d.)]

The business woman in America is the constant preoccupation of Miss Baldwin's novels. Here we have Cathleen McElroy, who began life as an office girl and has attained when the book opens the status of "progressive realtor."

She has her choice suite of offices, her car and chauffeur, a good flat, clothes, food, all by the age of thirty; and she has, moreover, the comfortable "alone I did it" feeling. It was Bill Burke—"insufferable, arrogant, attractive"—with his shock of snow-white hair, Bill Burke himself a "self-made" advertising man, who threw doubts into her mind.

In Bill's opinion there was no such thing as a self-made woman; a tip here, a hint there, and a lift further on, from men in the know are necessary to get a woman going. With which forceful doctrine he preached her into marrying him, and later into giving up her business. He leaves her on the last page so reduced to essential feminine elements that she is murmuring—at thirty!—"Bill, do you think I'm too old to have a child?"

Which goes to show that even progressive realtors have something to learn.

MYSTERY SHORTS.

[The Best Mystery Stories of 1930. (Faber and Faber. 7s. 6d.)]

Here are twenty-five short stories by old stagers and new comers.

So many "mystery" stories appear in the course of a year that when they are sifted down to the best twenty-five, it may be dependent on that the chosen ones will have the authentic thrill or twist that is the bull these writers aim at. That is certainly so here. A good book for the holiday bag.

"DIFFERENCES" IN CANADA. [Canadian. By Wilfred Bovey. (Dent. 10s. 6d.)]

A consideration of the case of the French-Canadian by one who brings both sympathy and knowledge to his task.

The geographical background and the historic movements which put Europeans against that background are first dealt with; and then follows an examination of the present status of the Canadian in education, government, art, and so forth.

The author's aim is not critical; it is simply to set out what he has observed, to claim some recognition for the "differences" of the French-Canadians. He has put his case in a way that interested me very much. The book is finely illustrated.

HOW D'ARTAGNAN DIED.

Mr. Churchill's "Life" Of Marlborough.

History and romance are joined in a thrilling chapter of Mr. Winston Churchill's new book, "Marlborough: His Life and Times."

It describes the death of D'Artagnan, the renowned hero of the romances of Dumas. He was in command of the French Musketeers at the siege of Maastricht in 1673.

The Duke of Monmouth, John Churchill (afterwards Duke of Marlborough) and other young English gallants were fighting, on the same side.

They attacked a barricade strongly held by the Dutch. There was an opening, where only one man could pass at a time. D'Artagnan counselled prudence, but the Duke would not be held back, and the brave old Musketeer went forward and received his death wound in that deadly breach.

Mr. Churchill tells the thrilling story in detail, and gives a letter to the British Foreign Minister from Lord Allington, who was himself in the thick of this desperate fighting—"the bravest and briskest action they had seen," some old commanders said.

PAGES ON PAGANISM

Nell Gunn's new novel, "Sun Circle" is published by the Porpoise Press. The setting is once again the north country, near the scene of "Morning Tide."

The time of "Sun Circle" is the days of the Vikings and "the small and active" Porpoise Press says that the clash of paganism and Christianity comes alive again.

HAUNTED BY "FUTILITY" OF LITERATURE

Poet's Deliberate Silence.

MR. PAUL VALERY

Paul Valery has had two periods of creative life, the first when as a very young man he wrote verses under the influence of Mallarme, but refrained from collecting them.

The young man had achieved a certain celebrity. The middle aged man whose long interval of silence had been spent partly at the Ministry of War, partly at the Havas News Agency, soon ascended, he would have us believe, almost in spite of himself to the position of an internationally famous poet, writes Mr. Peter Quennell in the "New Statesman" in the course of a review of a new critique of Paul Valery.

Fame has not increased his productivity; aphorisms, short essays, an occasional dialogue, a preface to a commentary on his own verse elaborated by that formidable critic, Alain, have left the fountain head in a precious and irregular stream, to be caught up stored away in expensive booklets.

"Futility" Of Literature.

This dualism Miss Bosanquet carefully emphasises. Valery has announced that, even to-day, he finds the whole business of reading and writing tedious and unsympathetic as a form of work. Like Maurice de Guerin, and to a lesser degree Jules Laforgue, he is haunted by the futility of literature and something inherently vulgar about its expression.

He is more interested in its methods than its results: "From the moment, I said to myself, that a principle has been recognised and grasped by someone, it is quite useless to waste one's time applying it..." "Hence his seventeen years of absolute silence. He is, none the less, a poet whose sense of words, whose feeling for the voluptuous sadness of physical beauty, has over-flowed in half a dozen incomparable passages.

A Classical Writer.

He possesses, in common with the greatest French poets—a generalisation that might be extended to cover Mallarme, whose obscurity has often been exaggerated—a faculty of direct and lucid statement that marks him down, willy-nilly, as a "classical" writer. Elsewhere, he shows the trace of his Symbolist origins. He is nauseated by the slimy track of personal romanticism.

"Sentimentality and pornography," he wrote to Gide as a young man, "are twin sisters. I loathe them both;" and, in a subsequent letter, "Metrics is a kind of algebra...Verse is an equation, rightly stated when the solution is equality, which means that it is symmetry." He is anxious to take the poetic machine to pieces, cleanse it of the oily deposit of romantic feeling, and re-compose it on a more mathematical plan.

He dreams of mathematics "as the Symbolists dreamed of music. It is generally difficult to gauge the effect on a writer's work of his extraneous intellectual interests and the exact part which they have played in his composition. Would Valery be an easier poet if, in his youth, he had not devoted himself to mathematics and psychology and pored over the notebooks of Leonardo? Certainly, we should have had a very different Valery.

But then, the question, like most questions of the same kind, ignores the fact that it is not his interests that determine the poet's effect may be important, but it is always secondary—so much as the individual poet who determines his interests. Narcissus's long debate with his own image needed the assistance of some sort of external mirror.

ANOTHER ELLEN TERRY BOOK

Important Addition To Her Biography.

THE LAST PHRASE

Five years, almost to a day, since Ellen Terry's coffin was carried into Smallhythe church with a guard of honour of haymakers and shepherds, appears an important addition to her biography, which has been brought up to date by her daughter, Miss Edith Craig, and by Miss Christopher St. John.

Miss St. John has unearthed some candid remarks, headed "About H. L." Most of Ellen Terry's comments on Henry Irving are complimentary; obviously she adored the great artist in him and "his patience, his strong, practical will, his gentle courtesy."

But she tells us that he was "incapable of caring for people, sons, friends, anyone," and showed "a lack of enthusiasm for other people's work." A note of 1897 runs: "He is not improving with age...His illness has made him look queer. He is stouter, very grey, sly-looking. Bother!"

Again: "He is the 'wonderfullest man, for he is not richly gifted, except in constructive brains.' Towards the end Ellen Terry 'was a prey to the terror that she might go mad. Miss St. John writes: 'The B.B.C. had arranged a special Ellen Terry programme on her eightieth birthday, and a microphone had been installed in the house where she was staying. One of the latest 'portables' was brought down in order that she might listen to the programme. I recall as the most poignant moment of my life hearing the mad scene from 'Hamlet,' with Fay Compton as Ophelia, downstairs, while upstairs the fair Ophelia of 1878, now a distraught old woman...was playing hear."

Never on any stage did Ellen Terry appear in a scene more dramatic than that.

RUSKIN UNDER REVIEW

"Ruskin" is the title of a book by R. H. Wilenski which Faber and Faber publish. Mr. Wilenski has written especially about Ruskin's solution of present problems in "this startling but carefully documented book."

THRILLS OF THE GRAIN RACE

Clever Description From "Conrad Of Fact"

"The Conrad Of Fact" is a description of A. J. Villiers, who has written "Voyage of the Parma," the Finnish barque of which he is part-owner. The Parma last year won the Great Grain Race, out of a score of sailing ships, and her time from port to port was 103 days.

At the helm, in a squall in which the ship was nearly lost, "Captain de Cloux, who had been dashed across the deck, his leg severely battered, one finger gone from his hand, after three hours brought her out and she lay hove-to in safety."

Moses, one of the three small boys of the crew, who was old enough to have been in prison for smuggling, asked "if this was a great storm. Assured that it was, he expressed a desire to see a hurricane."

"MY FIRST SIXTY YEARS"

Lady Maud Warrender has published a book called "My First Sixty Years," with Cassell.

It has descriptions of her homes in Dorset and Kent and anecdotes of royalty, peers, statesmen, diplomats, artists, singers, and actors ranging over Great Britain, America, India, China, Italy, Germany and other lands.

SIDEGLITS ON THE CIRCUS

Some years ago Edward Seago, the painter of well-known pictures of sporting and circus life, joined a travelling show. His "Circus Company" is one of Putnam's new books.

In this book, which Mr. Seago himself has illustrated, he tells his readers that "no animal whatsoever can be made to perform through sheer terror."

ENGLISH ECCENTRICS

Faber and Faber publish "The English Eccentrics," by Edith Sitwell. The reception accorded to Miss Sitwell's survey of the fantastic characters in the great days of Bath suggests that this will be interesting.

P. E. N. CLUB AND HITLERISM

Heated Debated At Ragusa.

H. G. WELLS' CONDEMNATION

Vienna.

There was a heated debate recently at the annual congress of the P.E.N. Club, opened at Ragusa under the presidency of Mr. H. G. Wells.

Mr. Wells is reported to have said in his presidential address that the object of the P.E.N. Club, which was to unite the nations in a great fellowship, could be attained only if freedom of thought were guaranteed. In future political questions would have to be discussed in the congress because politics were a part of the spiritual striving of man.

M. Jules Romain (France) proposed that representatives of both the old and the new German P.E.N. Clubs should be heard by the congress, in view of the assertion of the new German delegates that the outer world had many false ideas of recent events in Germany.

After a long debate a motion clearly directed against Hitlerism was supported by delegates from 16 countries. The German delegation declared that if the motion were to be adopted it would leave the congress. The Swiss, Greek, Dutch and Austrian delegates shared the opinion that German internal affairs were outside the province of the P.E.N. The Italian delegate said that Italy was in favour of tolerance—her Minister of Finance was a Jew—but he was against meddling in the affairs of other countries.

ORIGINAL SHAKESPEARE INTERPRETATION

Mr. G. Wilson Knight has done remarkable work as an original and individual interpreter of Shakespeare. Macmillan will publish soon "The Christian Renaissance," in which Mr. Knight has applied his method of Shakespearean interpretation to other poets, especially Dante, Goethe, and the poets of the Romantic Revival, as well as to the New Testament and Christian dogma generally.

Sir John Marriott's Queen Victoria and Her Ministers will come from John Murray shortly.

No Change In Indian Policy.

In the India Joint Committee Sir Samuel Hoare has spoken strongly of what he described as the "very gross misrepresentations" of his evidence before the Committee which have lately appeared in both the British and the Indian Press. Certain things said by him have, he said, been taken out of their context, and quoted in such a way as to imply that his attitude is "very different from what it really is." There are, in fact, no limits imposed upon the propaganda conducted in some quarters in Britain against the Government's Indian policy, any more than upon the temper of evenhanded suspicion that still inspires so much of Indian comment. Partial and misleading reports cabled to India have led Indian Ministers in the Provincial Governments to believe that a certain whittling down of the proposals for Provincial autonomy was now contemplated in London. Sir Samuel Hoare has given the reply to that suggestion with all due emphasis. It does not stand alone. Sir Samuel's perfectly candid statement upon the Indian financial situation, and the possible reaction of it upon the setting up of responsible government at the centre, has been seized upon by many as an intimation that it is intended to postpone the inauguration of the Central organisation, and to set up "merely Provincial autonomy" as the next instalment of Indian reform. The misrepresentation here is somewhat subtle. The fact withheld is that there was never any suggestion made that a simultaneous setting up of the Provincial and the Federal parts of the scheme would be practicable. What was and is proposed is the inclusion of both parts in the same Act, so that Parliament should be clearly committed to the policy as a whole. There could obviously be no federation until there was something to federate; no putting on of the roof before the edifice was constructed. The suggestion that the Government is running away from its own plans rather wears the appearance of a preparation on the part of the critic to run away from his own opposition; to say that, if the whole scheme is not to be carried out at one operation, then all may yet be well. It is to be noted that the kind of misrepresentation to which the Secretary of State refers has little or nothing in common with the opposition offered to the White Paper policy by responsible public men. Such criticisms have assailed the proposals with the authority of high administrative experience of India, or with the force of conviction which comes of a definite philosophy of Empire statesmanship, clearly stated. Those who argue from experience have plenty to urge, and have presented it fully and rationally. It is a view that cannot possibly be disregarded. But those who take their stand on the White Paper point to the supremely significant fact that their views are shared—have, indeed, been largely inspired—by virtually the whole body of those who have been carrying on the government of India in recent years, whether Viceroy, Governors of Provinces, or highly-placed members of the Civil Service. As for those critics who insist, like Lord Lloyd, that the sole consideration to be borne in mind is the well-being of the native population, and who consider the contemplated reforms to threaten that well-being, here again the answer is that of informed statesmanship. It is, that the worst possible thing for that population would be to live in circumstances of continuing repression and bitter ill-will, such as must follow on the denying to Indians what the whole past course of British policy has encouraged them to look for.

Italy's Magnificent Air Exploit.

Few things in the history of aviation have so appealed to the imagination of mankind as the magnificent exploit of the flying fleet under Gen. Balbo's leadership. The Rome-Chicago-Rome flight was completed in conditions which made an ideal setting for this triumph of technical perfection and trained skill. If laymen can admire, only experts can fully understand the significance of the feat; and those of our own Air Force are in a better position than any others to appraise its merits. Britain has led the way in the designing and operation of large flying-boats such as make up Gen. Balbo's command. Now Italy, which but a few years since could make no claim to high efficiency in this branch of aviation, steps into an ascendancy that is, in present circumstances, unapproachable, for no other country can assemble so large a homogeneous force of aircraft of this type. Spectacular though the final stage of the flight was, there has been nothing of the merely adventurous or record-breaking spirit about it. It was planned and carried out as a test of the performance of aircraft and engines, and of the degree of skill required for large-scale formation flying. In the event, the excellence of the Italian air-service has been signally advertised to all the world.

HERE, THERE and EVERYWHERE

Capt. De Havilland
Capt. Geoffrey de Havilland's victory in the King's Cup was deservedly popular. As a designer he has been famous ever since the appearance of the de Havilland aircraft helped to redress the balance of mechanical air-power during the war.

Before that our pilots had been fighting a gallant but hopeless battle against the German flyers with their faster and more trustworthy machines.

A Pioneer

Always a pioneer—Capt. de Havilland made (and crashed) his first machine in 1910—he has been a pioneer of private flying.

He is a great believer in air touring, travelling by air when and wherever possible. When his eldest son, Geoffrey, was at Stowe, he was taken to and from school in the first of the series of "Moths."

Nazi Road Plans

Herr Hitler's plans for training the German unemployed, and utilizing them in public works schemes under a system of military discipline, are well advanced.

One of the main tasks on which the labour army will be engaged is the construction of four great new roads to link Berlin with Cologne, Frankfurt, Munich and Hamburg.

The estimated cost is 1,200,000,000 marks, of which 900,000,000 marks will be covered by payments which otherwise would have to be made to the unemployed in the form of doles.

The new roads will be available exclusively for motor traffic.

Hitler and Ford

This is Herr Hitler's own scheme. It is the outcome of his interest in motorcars. They are his one hobby: his knowledge of them is encyclopaedic.

Hitler's hero in industry is Henry Ford. Mr. Ford, he says, has converted the motorcar from a class-dividing into a class-unifying instrument in America.

A STUDY OF POLAND'S DICTATOR

(By George Slocombe.)

[The new Pact between Soviet Russia and its border States, and the enthusiastic welcome accorded to Russian military aviators on their arrival in Warsaw are outward signs of important changes in Eastern European diplomacy. In this article, the writer, who was recently in Warsaw, discusses the new relations between Poland, Germany and the Soviets, and the dramatic moves and counter-moves made by the Polish dictator, Pilsudski, and the German Chancellor, Herr Hitler.]

NOT long ago I stood in John Sobieski's recoco little palace at Wilanow, on the wheat-covered plain outside Warsaw.

Portraits of the rude, vigorous man who saved Vienna from the Turk stared down at me from every wall of that charming retreat. The great crimson tent of the vanquished Sultan Mustafa filled one room of the palace, as a relic of the Polish King's spoils of war. And in many eloquent traces the memory of the greatest of the Polish monarchs is piously preserved by a nation only too conscious of its ancestry.

But these glorious relics are more and more neglected. A generation has grown up in Poland impatient of the past. It has received rude lessons in political realism from the violent hands and even more violent tongue of an ageing autocrat who shares with Sobieski the characteristic drooping mouth, high square forehead, harsh mouth, frowning brows, and steely blue eyes of the old-fashioned Polish noble.

It is notably different in mentality and outlook from the excitable, passionate, but often futile intellectuals who quarrelled over their newly recovered country's destinies until they were silenced by the hirsute Cromwellian figure, stalking abruptly into the Polish Diet and quelling them with a torrent of scornful and unprintable epithets.

A Lonely Figure

It is a generation disciplined, admonished and armed—for war or peace—by an enigmatical and latterly silent old man, who spends his days in solitary labour in a small room of the General Staff Headquarters in Warsaw, lonely figure in the grey, unstarred, unbranded uniform of the Polish Legion that he created, and who spends his nights in drinking innumerable glasses of weak tea and a playing an endless game of patience.

In the hands of that gruff-voiced recluse lie the chances of European peace. There is not the faintest exaggeration in this statement. Since the political, moral and emotional direction of Germany has passed into the control of men pledged to the restoration of Germany's original status in Europe, the fate of the western frontiers of Poland has become a question of urgent practical politics.

The future of that ancient Polish province of Pomerania, which divides Eastern from Western Prussia, and which since the war has become celebrated in history as the Polish Corridor, is again troubling men's minds.

The first shot fired over that contested frontier can with difficulty be prevented from provoking war. And war between Germany and Poland means all Europe in arms, from the Baltic to the Black Sea, from the North Sea to the Mediterranean.

Pilsudski is not blind to the danger. At the first intimation that Hitler's victory in Germany was inevitable the old lion sprang to the defence of the State he had founded. For the first time since his dramatic visit to Geneva five years ago he seized the levers of foreign policy. His first act was to send for the Soviet Ambassador, M. Ovsienko.

Two men conferred in secret for several hours. No official statement was published, then or subsequently, concerning the reason for the conversation—the first the Dictator had had with any foreign diplomat for at least three years. Friends of Pilsudski told me in Warsaw, however, that at this meeting certain assurances were sought and obtained by the Marshal, as a result of which his traditional distrust and hatred of Russia had been noticeably modified.

Soviet Caution

I was told that Pilsudski had abruptly demanded of the Soviet Ambassador what attitude Moscow would take in the event of a conflict between Poland and Germany. The Ambassador is said to have replied with great caution. His country, he explained, was bound by a treaty of friendship with Germany and also by the pact of non-aggression concluded with Poland. In the end, however, the Russian envoy is believed to have declared that if Germany made an unprovoked attempt by arms to regain possession of the Corridor the Soviet Union would maintain a benevolent neutrality in the ensuing conflict.

And with this undertaking, which obviously liberates Poland from the burdensome necessity of maintaining a large force upon the Russian frontier, the old Marshal is said to have declared himself content.

News of this secret meeting and conjectures as to its importance were not long in making their influence felt in Berlin. The first result of the encounter was an urgent instruction to Nazi storm detachments on the Polish frontier to observe the utmost caution; and on no account to risk provoking a frontier incident by anti-Polish speeches or demonstrations in the vicinity of the frontier.

The second and more public sequel to Pilsudski's demarche was the conversation, held upon the German Chancellor's invitation, between Hitler and the Polish Minister, M. Wysocki, in Berlin on May 3. During this conversation, almost immediately followed and confirmed by a similar meeting between the Polish Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. Beck, and the German Minister in Warsaw, the German Chancellor gave assurances that his intentions were friendly and that no attempt would be made to provoke a conflict with Poland.

Hitler's Genius

If Pilsudski's first move in the diplomatic game was astute, Hitler's was no less. The Nazi Chancellor countered precaution by precaution. His latest act of conciliation towards Poland has even the inspiration of genius.

Realising that considerations of prestige, as well as of racial and religious antipathy, make any direct exchange of visits between the leaders of the two countries impossible, Hitler has struck upon the shrewd expedient of sending the Nazi leaders of Danzig with an olive branch to Warsaw.

During the past few weeks the Nazi President and Vice-President of the new Danzig Senate, Herr Rauehning and Dr. Griser, have visited the Polish capital to discuss the relations between Poland and the Free State.

The fact that they are both Germans and prominent Nazis gives their visit an obvious significance. For some months to come at least,

DICTATORS BORN—
NOT MADE.French Astrologers' Study.

Paris.

You may be marked out to become a world dictator—if only your birthday is on the right day.

Astrologers in France have been studying what the stars foretell about the men who might lead the world to reorganisation on some strong-man lines. They say that people born at the following times are marked out to be dictators:—
March 13, 1871, between 9 p.m. and 11.30 p.m.
July 19, 1889, between 6 p.m. and 10 p.m.

January 13, 1899, between 6 p.m. and midnight.
September 7, 1909, between 3 p.m. and midnight.

The astrologers have therefore invited anyone claiming these dates as birthdays to send in a photograph and a copy of their birth certificate.—Reuter.

SAMPAN RAIDED FOR OPIUM

Chinese Fined $4,000.

BOY NEARLY DROWNED IN ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE

Chan Shiu, aged 15, nearly lost his life at West Point on Saturday when he jumped from a sampan into the water in an attempt to escape arrest when the boat was raided by Revenue Officers. He was rescued and brought to shore in an exhausted condition.

He was charged at the Central Police Court this morning with possession of 100 taels of prepared opium.

Another Chinese, Wong Ming, who was arrested on the same boat, was charged with possession of 143 taels of opium.

Revenue Officer Grimmit said that the sampan was raided as it came alongside the wharf in Connaught Road West, opposite the No. 3 Godown of the China Provident Loan and Mortgage Company.

The second defendant was arrested and the opium was found tied around his waist.

Chan Shiu, who could not swim, jumped into the water and was saved by a Chinese Revenue Officer.

A rubber band was found secured to his right leg. Divers were immediately sent down over the spot where he jumped into the water, and a package containing 100 taels of prepared opium was found.

Chan Shiu said that the rubber band had been given to him by another man, but denied that he carried the opium.

He was discharged and bound over in a sum of $50 for a period of one year.

Wong Ming was fined $4,000, in default six months' hard labour.

EUROPEAN CHARGED BY LOCAL FIRM.

Concealing Bankruptcy Alleged.

$385 CREDIT OBTAINED

Mr. William Frederick Gardener, of the Union Insurance Society of Canton, was summoned at the Central Police Court this morning at the instance of the Sincere Company for obtaining credit to the amount of $385.28, between December 6 1932 and February 4, without disclosing the fact that he was an undischarged bankrupt.

Mr. Peter Sin prosecuted on behalf of the Sincere Company, and Mr. W. A. Mackinlay was counsel for the defendant.

The hearing was adjourned until next Monday at 11.30 a.m.

News In Brief.

Mr. Roy Holbrook, Mr. Thomas L. Taylor, Mr. Roland L. Sansbury, Aviation Instructors for the Chinese Government, are passengers by the "President Coolidge," returning to Shanghai from a round trip to Manila.

Teang Tsung, an unemployed Chinese, was sentenced to three months' hard labour at the Central Magistracy this morning for stealing a silver pocket-watch from Chang Ching, an interpreter at the Sanitary Department.

SHANGHAI MAIL PLANE DUE TO-DAY

The flight will be exploratory, designed to reveal conditions to be normally expected. Incidentally it will be the first Shanghai-Manila flight on record.

Trans-Pacific Plans.

The prospective flight has focused attention upon previously announced plans of the Pan American Airways and the Goodyear Zeppelin Corporation, both of the United States, to span the Pacific.

Messrs. Bixby, Grooch and Ehmer are all officials of the Pacific American Airways, a subsidiary of Pan-American, which controls 45 per cent of the capital of the China National Aviation Corporation, now operating planes to Chungking and Peking from Shanghai. The flight is to be made in a twin-motored Sikorsky sea plane.

On December 1, last, it was announced at New York that the Pan-American concern, which for five years has been operating giant seaplanes to Havana and South America from the United States, planned to begin regular trans-oceanic schedules within the next two years with a fleet of four-motored all-metal monoplanes of 50-passenger capacity for which it already has contracted.

Terminus In Shanghai.

The company contemplates using all present ocean routes, across the Pacific by way of Hawaii and Manila, and to Europe by way of Newfoundland and Iceland and via Bermuda and the Azores.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who with Mrs. Lindbergh is now making a survey flight to Greenland and Iceland, is connected with the Pan-American concern and was reported to be enthusiastic over the new plans.

Contracts Awarded.

The trans-oceanic planes, of the flying boat type, are designed to have a radius of 2,500 miles and in addition to 50 passengers to carry a heavy load of mail and express.

Contracts for the new planes, which will be larger than any now in commercial service, were awarded to the Sikorsky Aviation Corporation of New York and the Glenn Martin company of Baltimore, and actual construction was to have started early this year.

The programme was the second involving service across the Pacific to be advanced recently.

The Goodyear-Zeppelin Corporation, builder of the Akron, Nautilus and other American naval dirigibles, has been trying to prevail on Congress to enact legislation to authorize dirigibles to carry mail from California to Honolulu and the Orient on the same basis as steamships.

Wants Dirigibles.

Mr. J. C. Hunsaker, Vice President of the Corporation and former American naval commander, said the proposed service probably would require the construction of from two to four dirigibles of about 7,000,000 cubic feet capacity each, slightly larger than the Macon, present world's largest dirigible and than the Akron, which was wrecked last April.

Mr. Hunsaker said they would have a speed of 75 miles an hour and conquer the 2,000 miles between California and Hawaii in 36 hours.

The initial plan was to carry mail and passengers experimentally to Honolulu and then extend the service to Tokyo and Manila, starting possibly in two years.

The Pan-American company's plan is to operate between San Francisco and Hong Kong, by way of Honolulu, Wake Island, Guam and Manila.

NEW BEVERAGE FROM CHICAGO FAIR

Tea Now Brewed With Cold Water.

A JAPANESE PROCESS

Chicago.

A new drink has been introduced into the United States by the World's fair. It is tea made with cold instead of hot water.

For 5,000 years, since the discovery of the tea plant, the world has been drinking hot tea, or tea made hot and then cooled.

Now it is made cool from the beginning.

This Japanese process is being exhibited at the World Fair. The tea is a special product grown only in the province of Shizuoka, Japan.

It is grown entirely in the shade. The leaf is plucked and dried quickly. Then, instead of being packed as leaf, it is first ground, then pulverized, then sifted and finally canned.

To make the drink, the tea is mixed with the desired quantity of sugar, then cold water and ice are added, and the mixture is stirred.

STEALING AND RECEIVING.

Theft From Sleeping Man On Blake Pier.

TWO CHINESE GAOLED.

Siu Piu Yin, an unemployed Chinese was sentenced to four months' hard labour at the Central Police Court this morning for stealing a cigarette case and 60 cents from a Chinese who had fallen asleep on Blake Pier.

Accused said that he was a Mohammedan and could not eat the prison food.

"It is not the first time that a Mohammedan has been sent to prison," replied Mr. Wynne-Jones.

Another Chinese, Au Hung, was sentenced to six weeks' hard labour for receiving the stolen property.

The two accused were arrested on information given to the police by Chinese who was sitting in the seat behind.

He saw the first accused take the cigarette case and money from the sleeping man's pocket, and, fearing that they might assault him if he intervened, left his seat and informed a police constable.

The men were searched and the property was found on the second accused.

Personal Pars.

Mr. Raymond O'Shea, late Editor of the "Critic," is also a passenger by the "Conte Rosso."

Mr. J. W. Arber, late Acting Manager of the Advertising and Publicity Bureau, left for Europe by the "Conte Rosso" on Saturday.

Mr. Raoul Bigazzi, proprietor of the Ateliers Bigazzi, is returning to Europe by the "Conte Rosso" after a short visit to Hong Kong.

Dr. J. C. Geiger, Health Officer for the City and County of San Francisco, who recently addressed local Rotarians on the subject of "Health of Cities," is a passenger by the s.s. "President Coolidge" with Mrs. Geiger.

The forthcoming marriage between Miss Minnie Irene Griffiths, stenographer, of No. 1, Ho Tung Mansions, Hankow Road, Kowloon, and Mr. David Lyon, Electrical Engineer of No. 3 Beechwood Terrace, Dumbarton, Scotland, is announced.

U.S. Dry Law Repeal This Year Seen As 16 States Fix Vote

Washington.

Wets asserted growing confidence that prohibition will be repealed before the end of the year as two more states fix elections for state conventions to act on repeal.

The Colorado legislature decided to submit the question of repeal to the voters of that state on September 12, while the governor of Utah decreed that an election should be held in the Mormon state November 7.

This brought the number of states which have fixed elections on or before November 7 to 16, while two or three other states have authorized elections which likely will be held before the end of December. Already 21 states have voted for repeal and not a single one has opposed it.

Thirty-six states are required to ratify the proposal before repeal is effective. By November 7, 37 states will have passed on the question; hence repeal may be achieved by that date unless the drys show unexpected strength and hold some of the states.—United Press.

To-Day's Short Story.

THE VAMPIRE

By Jan Neruda.

THE unpretentious steamer which plies daily between Constantinople and the Princes Islands landed us at Prinkipo, and we went ashore. There were only a few passengers, we two and a Polish family, father, mother, and the daughter with her fiancé. But no... there was someone else. A young fellow, a Greek, had joined the boat at Stamboul on the wooden bridge across the Golden Horn. We concluded, from the sketch-book which he was carrying, that he was an artist. He had long black curls down to his shoulders; his face was pale, and his dark eyes deeply set. At first I was interested in him; he was very obliging, and able to give a good deal of information about the country we were travelling in. But he talked too much, and after ten minutes I left him alone.

The Polish family, on the contrary, was very attractive. The old people were kindly and gave themselves no airs, the fiancé was young and distinguished-looking, a man of the world. They were going to spend the summer at Prinkipo; the daughter was delicate and needed the air of the South. The beautiful, pale girl looked as if she had just recovered from or just fallen a prey to a severe illness. She leant on her fiancé's arm, frequently stood still to catch her breath, and now and then a dry cough interrupted her whispered conversation. Whenever she coughed her companion stopped and looked at her sympathetically, and when she recovered his look her eyes seemed to say: "It is nothing... I am quite happy."

They believed in her recovery and their happiness. The Greek, who had parted from us at the landing-stage, had recommended an hotel belonging to a Frenchman, and the family decided to take rooms there. The situation was not too high, the view exquisite, and the hotel offered every European comfort.

We lunched together, and when the mid-day heat had passed off a little, we all slowly walked up the slope to reach a pine-wood and enjoy the view. We had no sooner found a suitable spot to rest in when the Greek reappeared. He only bowed to us, looked round for a convenient place, and sat down at a few steps' distance from us, opened his sketch-book and began to draw.

"I believe he is sitting with his back to the rock so that we should not see his drawing," I said.

"We don't want to," said the young Pole, "we have plenty of other things to look at."

After a while he added: "I believe he is using us as a foreground. I don't mind."

Indeed, we had enough to look at. I do not think there can be a lovelier or happier place in the world than Prinkipo. Irene, the political martyr, a contemporary of Charlemagne, lived in exile here for a month. If I could have spent a month in this place I should have felt enriched in memories for the rest of my life. Even the one day is unforgettable. The air was so pure and soft and clear that the eye soared as on downy wings from distance to distance. On the right the brown rocks of Asia rose from the sea, on the left, in the distance, were the blue, steep shores of Europe: near us Chalki, one of the nine islands of the Princes Archipelago, lay mute and eerie, with sombre cypress groves; it looked like a haunting dream. A huge building crowns the summit of the island... it is a lunatic asylum.

The surface of the Sea of Marmora was covered with ripples, and played in all colours like a giant opal. In the distance it looked white as milk, near us it had a rosy shimmer, and between the two islands it flowered like a golden orange; the depth below was sapphire blue. Its loveliness was untroubled, no large ships were moving on it; only close to the shore two small boats, carrying the British flag, were cruising to and fro, a steam launch, about the size of a signalman's box, and a boat rowed by sailors; liquid silver seemed to drip from their oars when they lifted them rhythmically. Fearless dolphins tumbled about close to the craft, or leapt in long semi-circles across the water. From time to time huge eagles sailed from continent to continent in noiseless flight.

The slope below our seat was covered with roses in full bloom, the air was saturated with their scent. Sounds of music, vague and dreamy, rose to us from the arcades of the cafe on the shore.

We were all deeply affected; our conversation stopped, and we gave ourselves up entirely to the emotions called forth by the contemplation of this Paradise. The young Polish girl was lying on the grass with her head resting on her fiancé's breast. The delicate oval face took on a faint flush of colour, and suddenly tears welled forth from her blue eyes. Her fiancé understood her emotion, bent down and kissed them away, one by one. The mother saw it and wept like her daughter, and I... looking at the girl, I also felt as though my heart was too full.

"Here body and soul must recover," whispered the girl, "what a wonderful spot!"

"God knows, I have no enemies," said her father, "but if I had, and met them here, I should forgive them."

His voice was trembling. Again there was silence; we all felt an unspeakably sweet emotion. Everyone was conscious of a world of happiness within him which he longed to share with all the world. As we all understood what the others felt, none of us talked.

We had hardly noticed that the Greek had closed his sketch-book after about an hour's work, and taken himself off with a slight acknowledgment of our presence. We remained.

When several hours had passed, and the sky had begun to take on the purple tint which makes the South so attractive, the mother reminded us that it was time to go in. We descended in the direction of the hotel, slowly but with buoyant steps, like children free from care.

We sat down in an open veranda in front of the hotel. We had no sooner settled down when we heard sounds of quarrelling and abuse below us. Our Greek seemed to have an altercation with the landlord, and we listened to amuse ourselves. The conversation did not last long.

"If it weren't that I had to consider other guests..." said the landlord, while he came up to the veranda steps.

"Pray," said the young Pole, when he came near to our table, "who is that gentleman? What is his name?"

BAKEWELL SCORES CENTURY IN TEST DEBUT

England's "Tail" Wags Against West Indies.

SCORE 312 AFTER BEING 73 FOR 4.

London, To-day.

Lying their first four wickets for 73 runs before lunch England were indebted to the fine fifth wicket partnership between Bakewell and James Langridge and the ninth wicket stand by Barnett and Nichols for their total of 312 in the final Test against the West Indies at the Oval on Saturday.

Bakewell, making his Test debut, scored 107 as the result of a chanceless innings to join the small band of players who have scored a century on their first appearance in a Test. He and Langridge added 74 runs in 80 minutes after lunch.

England made one further change in their eleven, Barnett, the Gloucester batsman, coming into the side in place of Headley Verity, the Yorkshire slow bowler. Douglas Jardine, and Townsend were originally selected for places, but were displaced by M. J. Turnbull and Gregory.

Wyatt Wins Toss

The weather was very dull when R. E. S. Wyatt and G. C. Grant went out to inspect the wicket, which appeared to be affected by yesterday's rain. Wyatt, however, did not hesitate to give England first use of the wicket when he won the toss.

A crowd of 8,000 saw England make a disastrous start. With only 2 runs on the board Walters was caught by Merry off a ball from Martindale that got up awkwardly. 2-1-2.

Bakewell and Hammond added 25 runs before the Gloucester star was taken off. Valentine. 27-2-11.

Joined by his skipper Bakewell aided Wyatt to add 35 for the third wicket before Wyatt attempted to punish an over-pitched ball from Martindale and was easily caught at cover-point by Achong. 62-3-15.

Wyatt's Sequence Ended.

Wyatt's score of 15 concluded a sequence of three not out centuries. He had hit 187 against Worcester, 102 against Derby, and 150 against the West Indies in his three previous innings.

Further disaster befell England when Turnbull was completely beaten by Martindale after scoring a boundary to take the score to 68 for 4.

Bakewell (40) and James Langridge (1) then succeeded in playing out time before lunch which was taken at 73 for 4.

The rate of scoring had been very slow, 40 runs being scored in an hour. Martindale, the tourists' only real fast bowler, found that the turf would not take spin, but kept the batsmen quiet by his immaculate length. Many of his deliveries rose very awkwardly.

Fifth Wicket Stand

A crowd of over 20,000 saw Bakewell and Langridge add 74 runs in 80 minutes after lunch before the Sussex all-rounder was caught by Barrow. 147-5-22.

Shortly after Bakewell reached his century, scored in 210 minutes. He added only 7 runs in the next 25 minutes before being caught by Headley in the slips. Scoring his 107 out of 194 in 235 minutes he hit the boundaries in a chanceless display.

The West Indians met with further success, when 14 runs later Ames was also taken in the slips. 208-7-37. Barnett (12), and Nichols (0) then played out time until the tea interval, which was taken with the score at 215 for 7.

Barnett and Nichols added 60 in 45 minutes and 95 in 90 minutes before Barnett was dismissed for a faultless 50, scored in 90 minutes. He hit three boundaries.

Nichols was bowled by a ball which turned appreciably to get past the Essex player's forward shot. Nichols hit five boundaries in his 49.

England took 345 minutes to compile 312 runs.

INGENIOUS BETTING FRAUD.

Invisible Ink Used For Bookmakers.

Sydney, Aug. 6.

Disclosures made to-day show that a number of starting price bookmakers have been robbed of thousands of pounds, and some ruined, by a most ingenious system of using invisible ink.

Bettors half-way through a meeting would send in slips showing their bets for the remaining races on the programme. However, written in invisible ink on these slips, which usually are automatically filed by the bookmakers, were bets on the earlier races, which would come up sharp and clear before the time the bookmakers received the slips and settling time, which usually is many hours later.—Reuter.

PETERSEN TO REST FOR SIX MONTHS

Fight With Neusel And American Visit.

Jack Petersen, the British heavy-weight champion, will not fight again this year.

He has been ordered six months' complete rest, and, according to his father, who is also his manager, the champion will be unable to fulfil his forthcoming engagement with Walter Neusel or to accept the attractive offer to visit America for a world's light-heavy-weight championship fight with Maxie Rosenbloom.

The champion's father said: "Jack has undergone a further medical examination, and it was found that the injury which he received during his fight with Jack Doyle was more serious than we thought. The whole of the system has received a severe shock as a result of the blows he received."

"We were due to meet Neusel at Cardiff next month and a contest at Swansea was contemplated. Afterwards we would probably have accepted a tempting offer from America. All this means a big financial loss."

GLIDING OVER VESUVIUS.

20 Minutes Over Active Crater.

Berlin, July 18.

Robert Kronfeld, the Austrian glider pilot, is the first person to fly for 20 minutes in a glider over the active crater of Vesuvius.

Kronfeld describing his experiences over the huge cauldron, says:

"My flight lasted four and a half hours. The atmospheric conditions were very good, enabling me to glide comparatively low over the crater."

"A hellish furnace, continuously varying in colour, screened from view at intervals by heavy smoke-clouds, spat out simmering lava a few hundred feet below me."

"Suddenly flashes of lightning, accompanied by thunder, would shatter the rumbling noises of Vesuvius and the lava would burst into flame."

"It was a wonderful and impressive adventure which many times surpasses the thrill of establishing a new record."—Reuter.

SHANGHAI WIN INTERPORT LAWN TENNIS

Tientsin Outclassed In Two Singles.

STERN DOUBLES STRUGGLE.

Shanghai, To-day. Shanghai, by winning the first three matches, beat Tientsin in the Lawn Tennis Interport on Saturday. The results were: Guy Cheng beat Omar Rumjahn 2-6, 6-3, 6-1, 6-4. Khoo Hooi Hye beat Johannson 6-0, 6-0, 6-0. L. F. Stokes and Squires beat Way and Ferber 6-3, 7-9, 7-5, 7-5.

—Reuter.

Guy Cheng beat Teddy Fincher in the Interport against the Colony last year after losing the first two sets. He is considered one of the most promising players in China. Omar Rumjahn, his opponent, was a former Colony singles finalist and a doubles champion. In 1923 he was beaten by Ng Sze-kwong in the final round, and in the following year won the doubles title with H. D. Rumjahn against Ng Sze-kwong and C. Choa. This was the first of "H.D.'s" ten successive wins in this event.

The inclusion of Khoo Hooi-hye, the former Malayan champion and present holder of the Shanghai title, came as a surprise, as he and Gordon Lum left for the interior in an attempt to further the interests of tennis, and was not expected back in time to aid China to defend the Rotary tournament title.

L. F. Stokes is the Cricket Club champion and Interport cricketer.

Golf Etiquette—Timely Advice For Spectators

THE unruly conduct on the part of a number of spectators during the recent Ryder Cup competition in England, when in the words of an eminent correspondent "the crowd surged and thundered all over the course," has caused considerable comment in golfing circles, so that the publication of a little book, "The Etiquette and Tradition of Golf," by the Silver-town Company, is extremely well timed.

In recent years there has been a tendency for the "galleries" at golf matches to grow considerably, and the conduct of some spectators has not been all that could be desired. Those who are not yet acquainted with the laws of golf would do well to study this interesting and entertaining publication.

For the benefit of ignorant spectators, they should know that—"they should do what they are told by the stewards who are put in charge of the crowd. Some years ago, there was a vast crowd to see Vardos and Taylor play together in the Open Championship (writes the author). "Players, please," said one of the stewards, trying to make room for the two great men to reach the green. "Players, be d—," answered a spectator "we have come to see." In those paradoxical words is summed up

The India Recreation Club beat the Hong Kong Football Club by 49 shots at Soekunpoo in a friendly game on Saturday.

PORTUGUESE COY. WIN AQUATIC MEET

LIONEL ROZA-PEREIRA AGAIN OUTSTANDING

DONN WINS 50 YARDS TITLE

THE Portuguese Company with a total of 23 points, as against the Machine Gun Company's 7, carried off the Aggregate Cup and the Inter-Unit Relay trophy before a crowd of 500 people at the Volunteer's Aquatic meeting at the Victoria Recreation Club on Saturday night.

The outstanding performance of the night was that of Lionel Roza-Pereira, who carried off the 100 Yards Championship in 62 seconds, came second in the diving, and was mainly responsible for the Portuguese Company winning the Inter-Unit relay.

The Mobile Machine Gun Company sprang the surprise of the evening when they won the first heat of the Inter-Unit relay, beating both the Portuguese "B" and the Anzacs. In the final heat they swam splendidly, but Lionel Roza-Pereira's fine sprint for the Portuguese Company gave the favourites the race by a narrow margin.

The 50 Yards Championship provided another surprise when A. G. Donn, of the Scottish Company, won the event. He started behind Paget and E. B. da Roza, and swam almost level with Lionel Roza-Pereira until the turn when he sprinted magnificently to beat E. B. da Roza by a touch, the latter taking second place from Paget by the same distance.

The last event on the programme was the water-polo game which resulted in an overwhelming win for the Volunteers over the Combined Services by 7 goals to 1.

W. Schreuder, the skipper of the European Y.M.C.A. "A" team, Colony League Champions, was responsible for five of the goals, while W. F. Kerr, vice-captain of the "Y" team and captain of the Volunteers team, was responsible for one of the other two goals. Lionel Roza-Pereira culminated a brilliant evening's display by scoring the remaining goal.

M. M. de V. Soares did not have much to do in goal, but when called upon he dealt safely with any shot, except on one occasion when he was put-off by some one shouting at him and let through the Services' only goal, scored by Selley from close in.

Volunteers—M. M. de V. Soares (Portuguese); H. Lange (A.S.C.) and N. Delgado (Portuguese); A. G. Donn (Scottish); L. M. Roza-Pereira (Portuguese); W. Schreuder (A.S.C.) and W. F. Kerr (Machine Gun) (Captain). Combined Services:—Lt. Norbury (R.A.); Heard (Navy); and Lt. Ramus (R.A.) (Captain); Stevenson (Navy); Selley (R.A.); Campbell (Borderers) and Sutherland (Borderers).

NEWS IN BRIEF

2 TROUT ON SAME FLY

Bend, Ore.—Two trout were hooked on the same fly at Dillon Falls by George Buegler, secretary of the Deschutes County Sportsmen's Association. Furthermore both trout, a rainbow and a five-pound German brown, were landed.

Buegler made a cast and the fly had hardly touched the water when the rainbow struck, followed in a flash by the brown trout. The rainbow had slipped up on the leader, leaving the barbed fly for the larger fish.

Amsterdam.—Ross Thompson, the American golfer, avenged his defeat of 1921 in the final of the Dutch Amateur Championship, when he defeated R. Chittenden, the English player, by 4 and 3 in the final over the Helder course.

In the semi-finals Ross Thompson beat Delcourt van Krimpen (Holland) by 3 and 2, while Chittenden beat Lionel Munn by 2 and 1.—Reuter.

New York.—The only souvenir which J. E. Lovelock, the Oxford runner who during the contest against Princeton and Cornell, set up new world figures for the mile, will take back to England with him is the blank cartridge from the starter's pistol.

St. Malo.—Lieut. colonel J. S. Alison's Lorraine, the only British competitor in the yacht race from Cowes to Dinard for the King Edward Cup, came in fourth. The first three were: Forban II. (Dr. Joltrain) 1, Minoru (M. de Elverault) 2, Falles (M. F. Roques) 3.

Murray Bay (Quebec).—Playing over a Canadian course Jacques Archambault, who recently won the Inter-Collegiate Golf Championship of Canada, took a bet of 300 to 1 that he would do a hole-in-one during the round. He did the hole in one at the seventeenth (170 yds).—Reuter.

Conservative Fight Over Indian Policy

Rebel Members Defeated By Leader

MR. BALDWIN'S PERSONAL TRIUMPH

London. Mr. Stanley Baldwin has won the first round in the trial of strength with the Conservative rebels over the Government's India policy. The rebels came off second best and the result was a big personal triumph for the Conservative leader.

By a majority in the proportion of seven to three the Conservative Conference which met in London voted in favour of postponing any final conclusion on the Government's policy until the Joint Select Committee had reported, thus rejecting a "rebel" resolution which expressed grave anxiety at the Government's scheme for Indian constitutional reform, as set out in the White Paper.

Whilst the rebels sought to make the merits of the Government's scheme the real issue, they were out-manoeuvred, for the voting actually took place on an amendment to "suspend judgement" and thus no direct verdict on the scheme was secured. Nevertheless the discussion naturally centred on the Government's proposals and the vote can thus be taken as giving an approximate idea of the extent to which the Conservative Party is split on this issue.

Churchill's Failure. The Conference was dramatic to a degree, for it was generally recognised that not only the Government's policy but even Mr. Baldwin's leadership of the Party was at stake. Lively incidents abounded and excitement ran high. Apart from Mr. Baldwin's powerful defence of the Government, the outstanding features of the gathering were Mr. Winston Churchill's unaccountable failure and the moving intervention of Lord Carson, the veteran Ulster leader, who is now in his 79th year.

Over 1,200 delegates were present, including several hundreds of Conservatives M.P.s and Peers. The fact that such an important gathering should have been presided over by a woman, Miss Regina Evans, shows how prominently the feminine sex is coming to the fore in politics. Any doubts as to whether Mr. Baldwin retains his sway over the Party were quickly dispelled by the enthusiasm with which he was greeted on rising to make a fighting speech, and incidentally to secure a big personal triumph.

An emphatic assertion that the Cabinet were united on the Government's policy (thus disposing of suggestions that the Chancellor of the Exchequer disagreed), a denial that this was a scheme inherited from the Socialists, and a promise to consult the Party again after the Select Committee had reported and when the time came for legislative proposals, were among Mr. Baldwin's scoring points. His nastiest knock was at Lord Lloyd, of whom he observed "I cannot believe that political wisdom died in India the day he sailed from Bombay"—a reference to Lord Lloyd's former post of Governor of Bombay.

Meeting in Uproar. As the star performer on the rebel side, Mr. Churchill failed sadly. Perhaps the frequency with which he was interrupted threw him out of his stride, but the fact remains that his denunciation of the Government's policy was far from being one of his best efforts and his speech proved distinctly a damp squib. Some of his statements provoked uproar—particularly in a passage at arms with Mr. Baldwin to the latter's past utterances—and at times he had difficulty in making himself heard. Some observers even go so far as to suggest that his speech had the effect of losing votes for the rebels rather than gaining them.

A moving incident came when Lord Carson, triumphing over ill-health and the infirmities of old age, was assisted on to the platform to oppose the Government. As one who led the fight against Home Rule in Ireland, he drew the moral that paper safeguards were useless and that the Government's proposals might involve a great disaster to India and the Empire.

The most effective speeches for the rebels were those of Lord Lloyd and Sir Henry Page Croft which were typical of the apprehensions which undoubtedly a very big section of the Conservative Party feels over the Government's scheme. Lord Hailsham—perhaps the most brilliant lawyer-statesman of the day—wound up for the defence by accusing Mr. Churchill of making wild statements.

In the upshot, both sides hailed the result of the vote with satisfaction. The Baldwinites regard the verdict as a decisive justification of the Government's action, whilst the rebels claim that it shows that nearly one-third of the Conservative party is definitely opposed to the Government's policy and that the remainder are only prepared to suspend judgment. Whatever view one takes, it is plain that the rebels are not prepared to bury the hatchet, for they are planning to fight the issue again at the big annual Conservative Conference at Birmingham in October, in the meantime they are to carry on their campaign in the country.—Reuter.

THE VAMPIRE.

"Oh, God knows what the fellow may call himself," said the landlord bad-temperedly, and looking daggers over the balustrade. "We call him the Vampire."

"An artist, I suppose?"

"Nice sort of an artist.... paints nothing but corpses. No sooner has anyone died hereabouts, or in Constantinople, when the fellow is ready with his death mask, the very same day. That's because he draws in advance.... but the devil knows, he never makes a mistake, the vampire!"

The old Polish lady gave a shriek; her daughter had dropped into her arms in a dead faint, looking like death itself.

Her fiancé leapt down the steps at one bound, seized the Greek with one hand and his sketch-book with the other.

"We ran down after him; both men were rolling in the dust."

The sketch flew open, the leaves were scattered, and we saw on one of them a striking portrait of the young girl. Her eyes were closed; a myrtle-wreath encircled her forehead.

LOST NEGRO MAKES RICH GOLD STRIKE

47 Years Prospecting Rewarded.

MINERS FLOCK TO NEW KLONDYKE.

Copper Gulch.
Because a gray-haired Negro became lost on a copper-coloured mountainside at the edge of dazzling Royal Gorge, there is a new stream of glittering gold and silver wealth flowing out of Southwestern Colorado.

For 47 years Robert Hoard scratched out of the mountains a scant living for himself and wife and their children. A few weeks ago "Old Bob," now 61 years old, left his family in Canon City and started toward Westcliffe, hoping to get a grubstake, as he had been doing for years.

He took through the mountains
a short cut which led into unfamiliar surroundings. The surface formations of the region caught the prospector's eye, and the more he picked around in the rocks the surer he was that he had found real "pay dirt" at last.

Ignoring hunger — he had brought along only meager provisions — Hoard stayed three days, digging. Satisfied, he garthered up a bag of ore samples and, half-starved, hurried back to Canon City.

His "find" was verified. "Old Bob" had hit rich gold. His samples assayed $80 a ton and more.

When his discovery became known, the trials to Copper Gulch swarmed with miners, and every foot of ground within several miles of Bob's "hole" was soon staked out.

Overnight the gulch became a young Klondike. Miners are camped almost as thick as the pines in the canyon, most of them living in tents, a few in crude "lean-tos." All day long they drive their shafts — slow and tedious work with only picks, bars and sledges to break the ore and bucket wheellasses to hoist it to the surface.

Tender Feet Look On.

There are no roads up the gulch, but Fremont County officials have started to build a wagon road. There is no railroad closer than Parkdale, where the Denver and Rio Grande Western enters the Royal Gorge. To this 30-mile-distant place the miners will truck their ore when the wagon road is finished.

Easterners abound in the mining camp. Without money, equipment or knowledge of mining, they watch and learn and take miners' promises of a "split" in return for their labour. At night, around the camp fires, they listen to the old miners' tales with awe.

The tenderfeet saw some gun play among the early arrivals in camp just after Hoard's discovery. An argument developed over naming the place. Some wanted it called "Hoardville," others "New Deal." The compromise selected was Copper Gulch, after six-shooters had been flourished and heated debate had taken place. — Reuter.

MAN WHO SOUNDED THE SOVIET.

the armed truce between Poland and Germany will not be disturbed by disputes between the Poles and the Nazis in Danzig.

But even while these conciliatory meetings were proceeding in Warsaw Pilsudski's farseeing diplomacy had not been idle. In London Polish representatives recently signed a friendly pact with the Soviet Union and its other border States which still further guarantees, if only indirectly, the Polish frontiers on the East, the North and the South-east, from the danger of an aggression which would cripple Poland in the West.

Germany is now diplomatically isolated, except for the fictitious protection of the Four-Power Pact — a mere paper umbrella under which France, Germany, Italy and Great Britain may consort together while the sun is shining, but of pathetically little advantage in a storm.

The States which encircle Germany are now protected, not only from each other, but from their own neighbours in the rear. Thus far the plans of that grim old warrior in his simple room in Warsaw have triumphed. The next move is with Hitler.

Green lead Craigengower, who have a game in hand, by 2 points.
The champions will meet the Recreio at the Valley and the Civil Ser-

MUSSOLINI CREATES BALBO AIR MARSHAL

Lieutenant Squaglia's plane crashed in attempting to take off at Ponta Delgada, resulting in his death. The occupants apparently were not seriously injured.

Three planes remained behind for a time to care for the victims of the mishap before proceeded to Lisbon.

A narrow harbour was blamed for the accident. The planes were obliged to pass out of the harbour and take off in the open sea, where waves were responsible for the mishap.

The other planes got off safely. It was the second fatal accident of the trip. Balbo lost one plane in landing at Amsterdam, where one man was killed and three injured. A substitute plane joined the fleet there and continued to America, maintaining the fleet at its full strength of 24 planes.—United Press.

WEST INDIES NEED 450 RUNS

Nichols And Marriott
May Cause Trouble.

DANGER OF COLLAPSE IN FINAL TEST

The West Indies require close on 450 runs to-day to establish a winning lead in the final Test at the Oval.

Securing 4 wickets for 73 runs before lunch on Saturday the tourists failed to press home their advantage, the last six English wickets adding 239 runs to give England the useful total of 312.

Much will depend on the opening partnership between C. A. Roach and I. Barrow, and the form displayed by George Headley, the "Black Bradman" of the touring party, as the side possess a very definite "tail."

The English attack is well varied, but it lacks the sting of Macaulay and Bowes, and the subtleties of Verity, who was forced to stand down at the last moment, being replaced by Barnett.

Langridge caused a sensational collapse in the Old Trafford Test, but the tourists are not likely to be twice trundled out in the same manner. Clark has met with great success against the visitors, but they have played his bowling so often now that they are becoming accustomed to the tall left-hander's

RED SOX SCORE 11 IN ONE INNING

The standings of the leaders were unaltered by the number of surprise results, except that the Senators are now well ahead of the Yankees in the race for the American League pennant and representation in the World Series.

Nichols and C. S. Marriott are the bowlers they have seen very little of, and on them England are depending for victory.

England won the first Test at Lord's by an innings and 27 runs, and drew the second at Old Trafford where they required only 227 to win.
